THE ENGINE OF PROGRESS: GENDER EQUALITY DRIVING NATIONAL SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Under the leadership of our esteemed President and guided by the slogan “The State is for people,” fundamental changes are taking place in our country to strengthen the democratic foundations of the state, consolidate the principles of democracy, and ensure human rights and freedoms. At present, Turkmenistan is making every effort to achieve the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), also known as the Global Goals, which were adopted by UN member states at the UN summit in September 2015. Gender equality is specifically designated as SDG 5 and is also one of the objectives of the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

According to UNICEF, gender equality means that “women and men, and girls and boys, enjoy the same rights, resources, opportunities, and protections.” Therefore, gender equality does not mean that women and men have to become the same, but rather that their rights, responsibilities, and opportunities will not depend on whether they were born male or female.

Gender equality is achieved when both women and men have the same rights and opportunities in all spheres of society, including economic participation and decision-making, and when the different behaviours, aspirations, and needs of women and men are treated equally.

Gender equality is more than mere equal representation; it is closely connected with women’s rights and often necessitates policy changes to address systemic imbalances.

The gender policy of our country is firmly aimed at ensuring the equal rights and freedoms of men and women, thereby fully realizing the constitutional norms on gender. It is known that the protection and observance of women’s rights at the state level is one of the essential conditions of sustainable development.

Issues related to gender equality are comprehensively reflected in the national legislation and in the programs for the social and economic development of the country, and they are inherently interconnected with the UN Sustainable Development Goals. Turkmenistan is committed to the norms of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and is a party to key international instruments, including the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the Convention on the Political Rights of Women, and the ILO Convention concerning Equal Remuneration for Men and Women Workers for Work of Equal Value.

In line with this commitment, and within the framework of the state’s gender policy, continuous work is underway to develop the legal sphere, strengthen democratic institutions, and consolidate civil society. Women’s rights are enshrined in a robust body of national law, including the Constitution of Turkmenistan, the Labour Code, the Family Code, the Code for the Social Protection of the Population, and the specialized Law of Turkmenistan on “State Guarantees for the Equal Rights and Equal Opportunities of Women and Men,” among other legal acts.

The norms set out in the Law “On State Guarantees for the Equal Rights and Equal Opportunities of Women and Men” aim to respect civil rights and prevent gender-based discrimination, ensuring gender equality in all areas of the state and social life. Specifically, the state guarantees equal opportunities for women and men in:

- The free choice of a profession and place of work;
- The conduct of entrepreneurial activity and vocational training;
- The combination of work with parental responsibilities;
- Safe working conditions and protection against unemployment.

Additionally, men and women are provided with equal pay for equal work and equal consideration in assessing the quality of work. The law also guarantees equal rights to participate in the management of any enterprise, organization, or institution, regardless of the form of ownership. The comprehensive program activities carried out in this field have been recognized by the international community.

In accordance with the legislation of Turkmenistan, the state ensures equal opportunities for women and men to vote and to be elected. The significant number of women deputies in the Mejlis (Parliament) demonstrates the active participation of women in the political, social, economic, and cultural life of the society. Women in Turkmenistan are also actively engaged in foreign policy. For instance, the country is represented by women diplomats, including the Permanent Representative of Turkmenistan to the United Nations. The government is committed to empowering women in leadership positions and encouraging their involvement in STEM-related fields.

It is noteworthy that in the last decade, the National Action Plans for gender equality were adopted and successfully implemented in Turkmenistan. These documents, considered essential national blueprints for improving the situation of women, were developed in accordance with generally recognized norms of international law.

The active role of Turkmenistan on the international arena in ensuring equal rights and opportunities for women and men enriches the nation’s experience in this field. In the Era of the Revival of the New Epoch of the Powerful State, Turkmenistan pays increasing attention to the protection of the rights of the mother and child and the improvement of family welfare.

The country has established special conditions and guarantees to protect the health of pregnant women, mothers, and children. A multi-functional system of material and social benefits is in place, with the government program “Health” being of particular importance. This program focuses on the further development and improvement of maternal and child health and women’s reproductive health. Special benefits are provided for mothers and children – such as an extra benefit for pregnancy, childbirth, and care for the child for three years – among others. The country thus ensures women’s reproductive health and access to necessary health services.

The establishment of the Charitable Foundation for Assistance to Children in Need of Guardianship named after Gurbanguly Berdimuhamedov in 2021 further solidifies the country’s commitment to the rights of the child and women. The Foundation’s main mission is to provide comprehensive support, primarily by financing complex, high-tech surgeries and treatment for children, especially those without parental care. By focusing on the most vulnerable children, the Foundation directly upholds the humanistic principles of the state policy and their rights to well-being, development, and social inclusion, which are cornerstones of sustainable development. This aligns with national policies and the slogan, “Healthy Mother – Healthy Child,” emphasizing the priority of maternal health. Thus, by relieving the financial and emotional burden of child health crises, the Foundation contributes to the economic stability and social participation of mothers and female caregivers, thus contributing to the full realization of their rights and opportunities within society.

It is worth noting that the cultural value placed on women, exemplified by the annual tradition where all working women, female students, secondary school female pupils, and all girls of kindergarten receive rewards on behalf of the President of Turkmenistan on International Women’s Day, March 8.

The Women’s Union of Turkmenistan functions successfully, regularly carrying out activities aimed at enhancing the social status of women, boosting their personal potential, and supporting their professional development. The Union’s activities, held in conjunction with various agencies and institutions, help to raise awareness of women on their rights. The Women’s Union also maintains close cooperation with UN agencies, the OSCE, and other international organizations.

Turkmenistan partners with international organizations to advance women’s development, achieve gender equality, and promote women’s economic empowerment and leadership, including supporting women-led start-ups. Notably, in collaboration with the UN Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia, the country helped foster the Dialogue of Women of Central Asian Countries. This Dialogue aims to strengthen women’s political, economic, and social roles in society, empowering them to participate in decision-making processes on issues related to peace, security, and sustainable development. It also encourages women and girls to take an active role in tackling climate change, acting as agents in climate change adaptation and mitigation.

In Turkmenistan, mothers have enjoyed popular esteem and respect since ancient times. The protection of the interests of the mother and child, their health, and the creation of favourable conditions for women who manage both work and family life remain a constant focus of the state’s attention.

To sum up, gender equality is crucial for the achievement of all Sustainable Development Goals. It is one of the fundamental human rights and is a main condition for a prosperous and sustainable world. Providing women and girls with equal access to education, health care, decent work, and representation in political and economic decision-making processes will inevitably promote national sustainable development, lead to a sound economy, and benefit society and humanity as a whole, thereby accelerating the achievement of the Global Goals.
